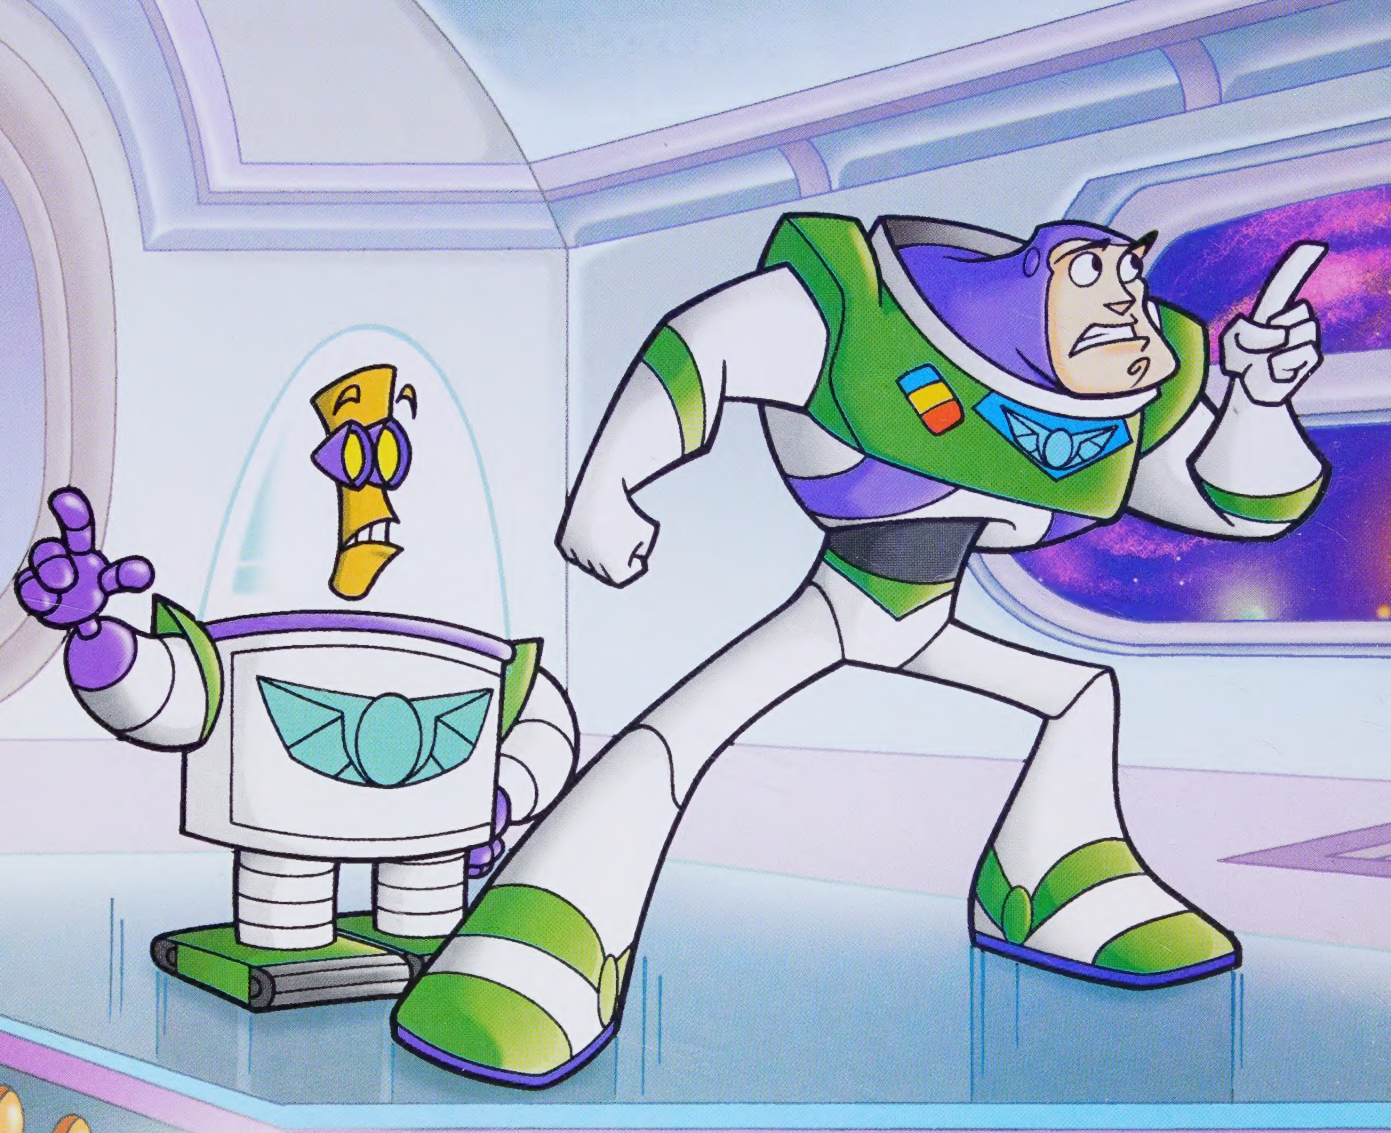
"Attention!" Mira announced. "We are the Space Rangers! Pull over immediately!" But the ship didn't stop. And it was heading right for the resort moon of San de Soleil!

"Blast!" cried Buzz. "If it keeps moving that fast, it's going to make one big explosion!" He fired off magnetic restraining

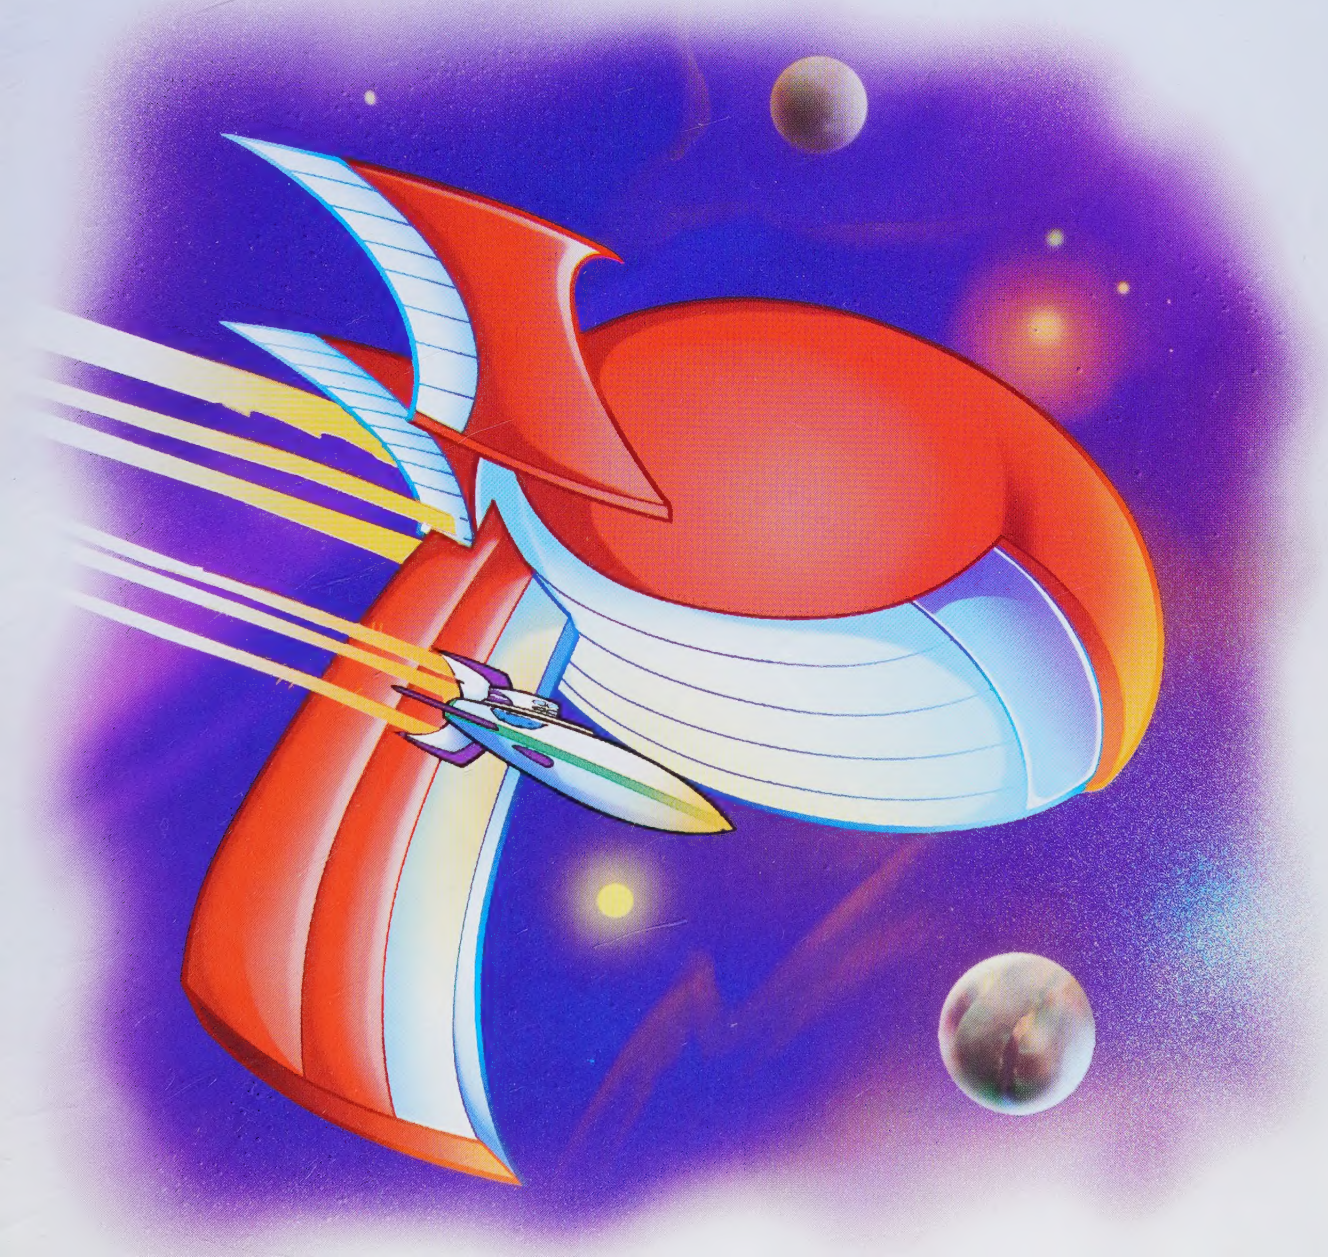
As the cables broke off, Buzz and the crew helplessly watched the moon blast apart with a giant KABOOM!



"That ship went right through San de Soleil without stopping!" exclaimed Buzz. "At its current rate of speed, it'll crash into the sun and cause a supernova that could destroy the entire universe!"

"And according to my calculations, that'll be in about one hour," added XR.

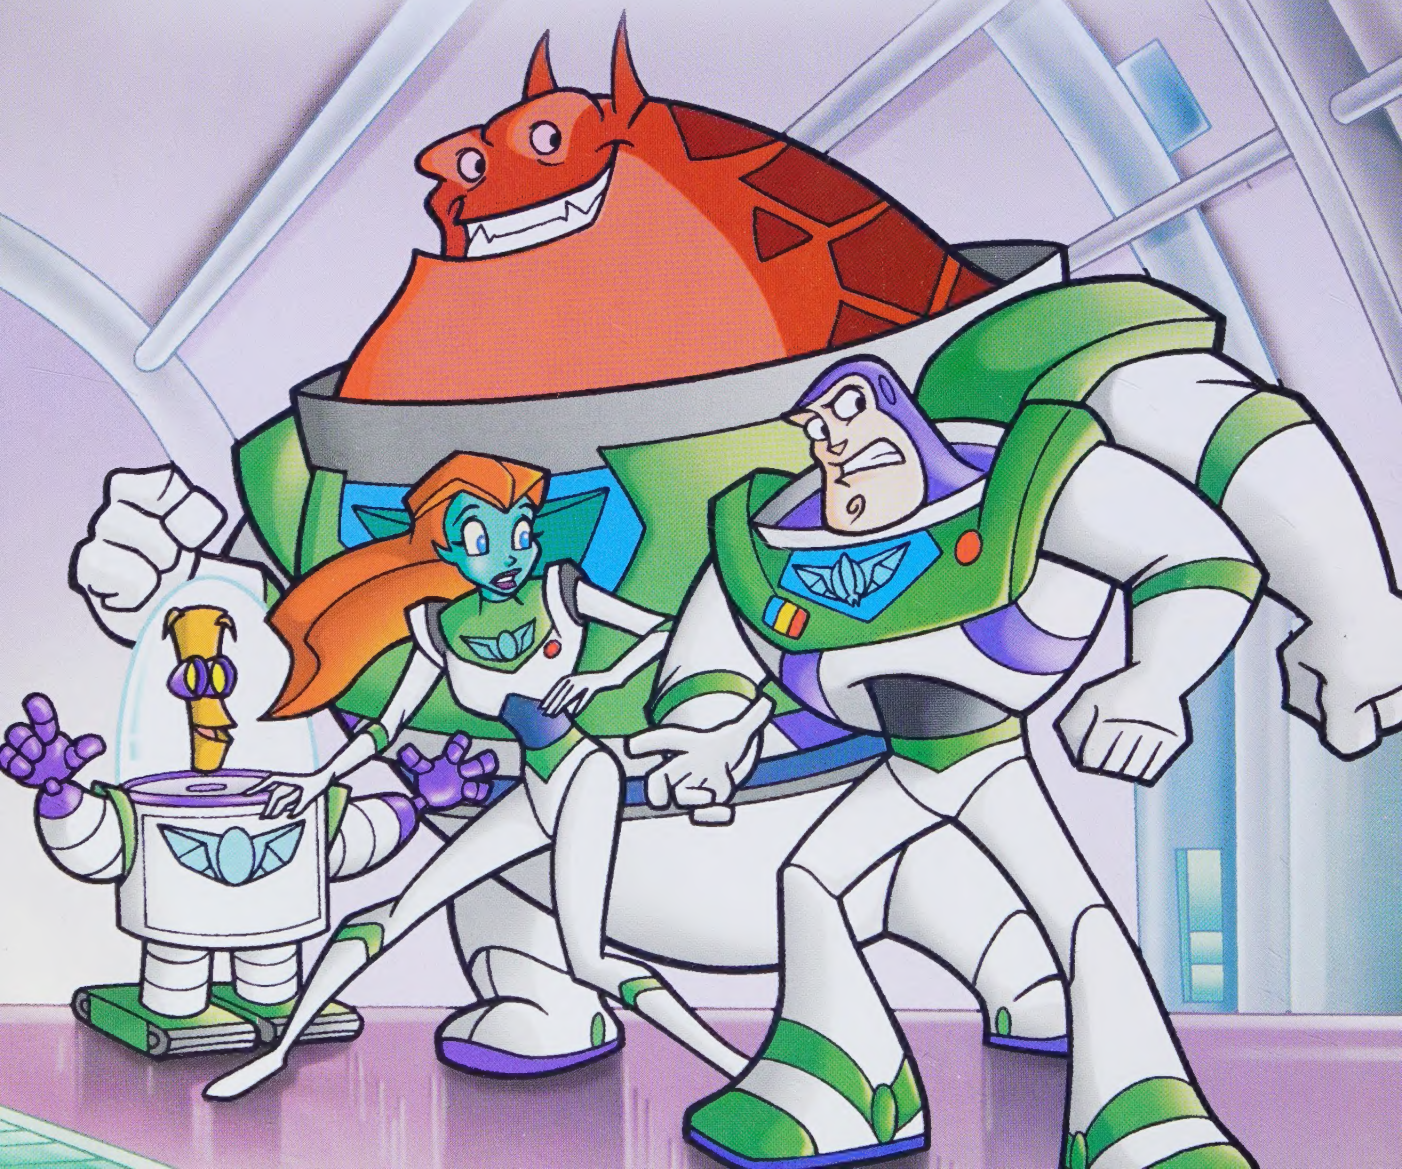
"We've got to stop that ship!" declared Buzz. He steered his ship right next to the alien craft and activated the magna-locks. "We'll board it through the airlocks, Rangers."



But when the crew entered the ship, they found no one there.

"Hello-o-o, is anybody home?" Booster's voice echoed.

"Maybe the crew abandoned ship," said XR. Suddenly, a little robot carrying a feather duster scooted across the floor.



"Care-bot is online! Please wipe your feet! No space dust allowed! No dust, no dust, no dust!" the robot shouted, and scooted back into the darkness.

"Uh, what was that?" asked XR.

Before anyone could answer, the Care-bot came back with a can of air freshener. "No space germs allowed!" it shouted as Buzz grabbed hold of it.

"Who's in charge of this ship?" Buzz demanded. "And where's your crew?"

"Care-bot is online!" shouted the Care-bot. "Cleanliness is top priority!"

"As it should be," answered Buzz as he let the Care-bot go. "This thing is on the fritz," he said to his crew. "Let's go to the bridge and see if we can stop this ship ourselves."

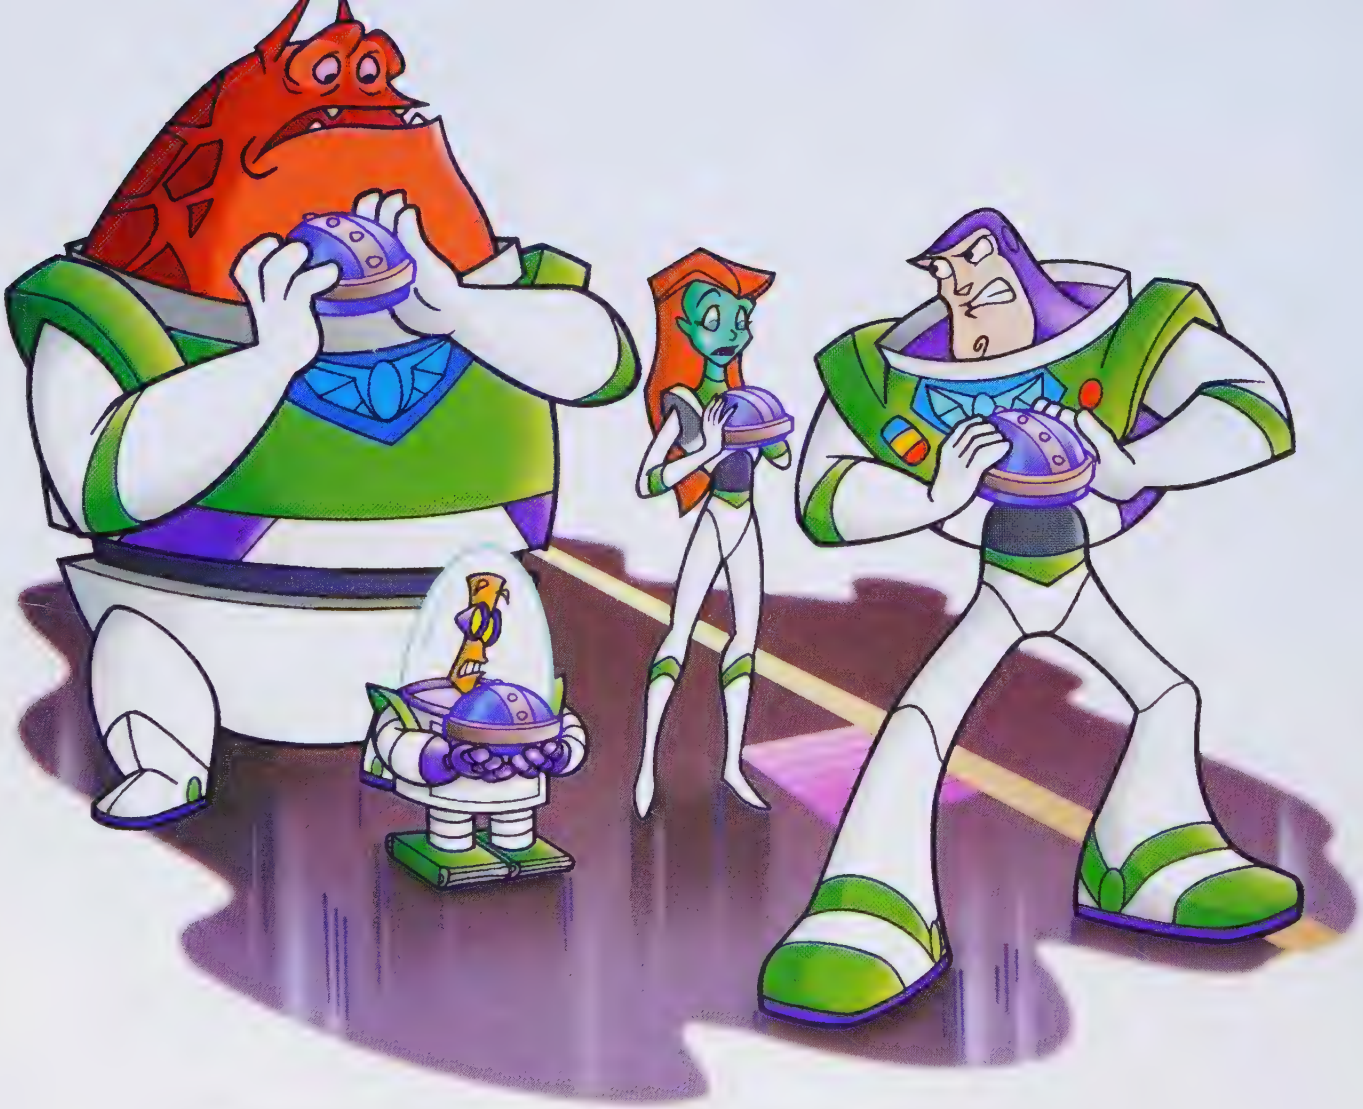
Buzz sat at the ship's controls. "They haven't made a spaceship I can't fly," he said confidently.

"We've only got thirty-nine minutes till this ship crashes into the sun!" exclaimed Mira. "Hurry!"

Buzz flipped a switch, causing a light to blink on and off.

"Uh, Buzz, I think that's the turn signal," said XR.

Buzz pushed another switch. A little red ring popped out of the control panel. "Ooh, a cup holder!" said Booster.
"Blast!" cried Buzz. "Let's just blow up this ship and get on with our day!"



Buzz and his Space Rangers carefully armed four bombs.

"T minus sixty seconds to detonation," said Mira.

"Okay, Rangers, time to exit the ship before it blows!" announced Buzz.

But as they arrived at the airlock, the Space Rangers discovered that the magna-locks weren't working. And their ship had taken off without them!

"Oh, no!" cried Booster. "There goes our ride!"

"T minus two seconds to detonation," announced Mira.

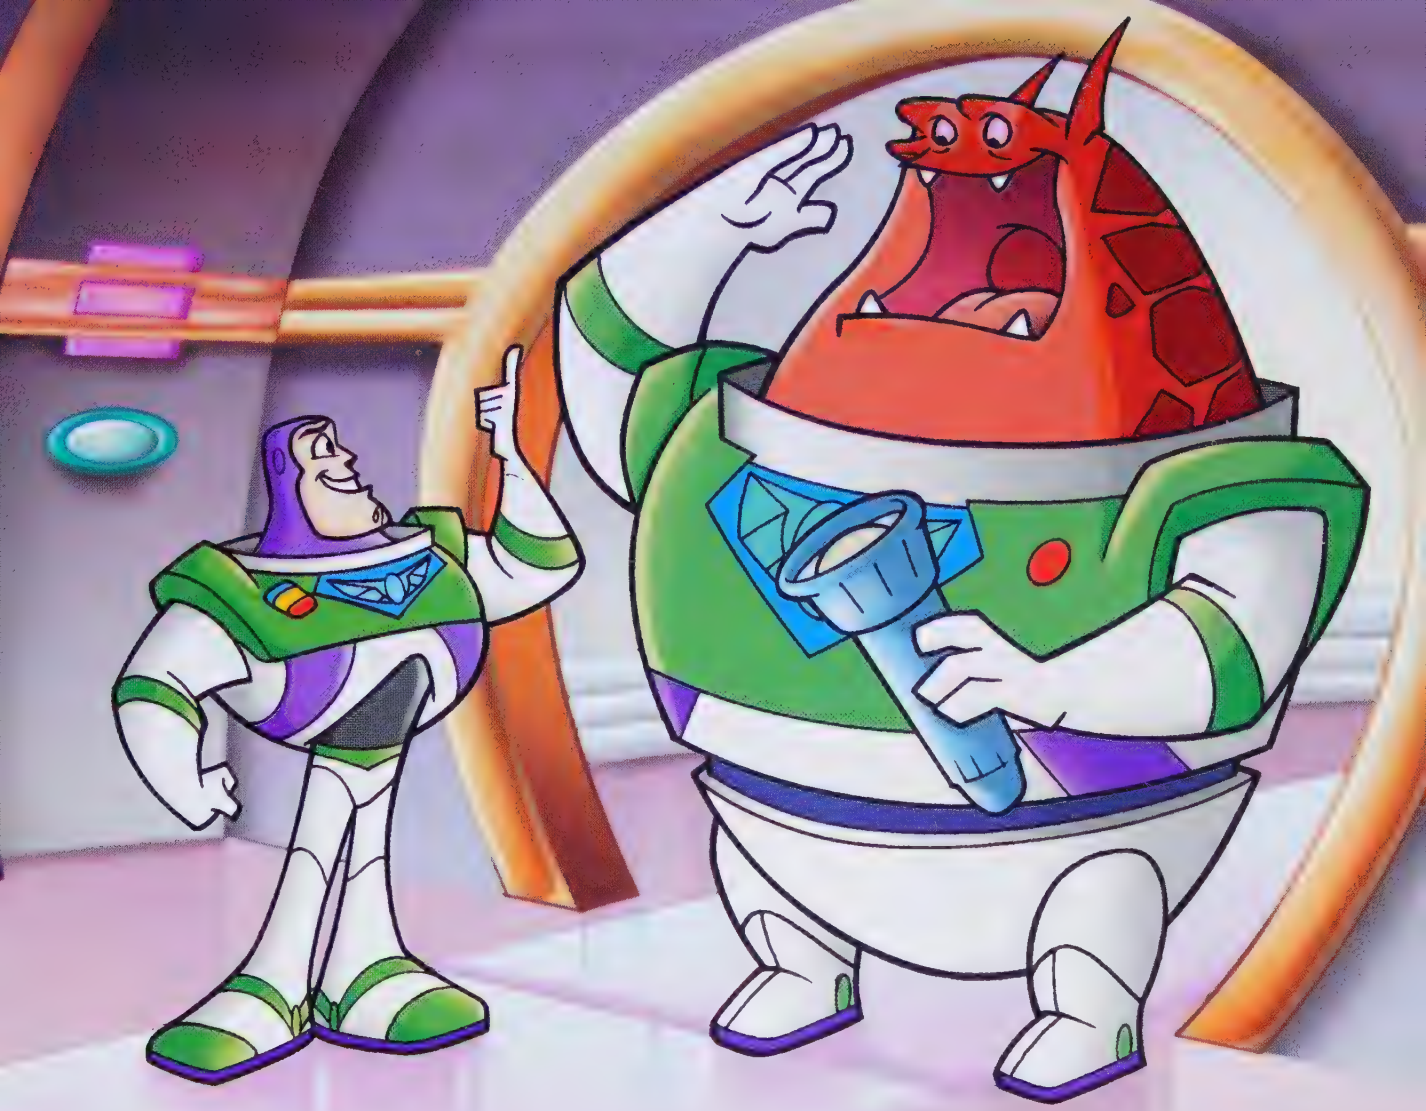
Buzz stood tall and gave a final salute. "At least the explosion will keep this ship from crashing into the sun and causing even more damage!"

The Space Rangers were ready for the big KABLOOIE when they heard, "Care-bot is online! We must not leave our explosive devices around willy-nilly!"

"Look," said Buzz, "the Care-bot has defused the bombs . . . and neatly, too!"

"Hey, hey, my cyber-brother," XR said to the little Care-bot. "You saved us!"

"Care-bot is online!" was the Care-bot's response. "Messy visitors! Messy visitors!"

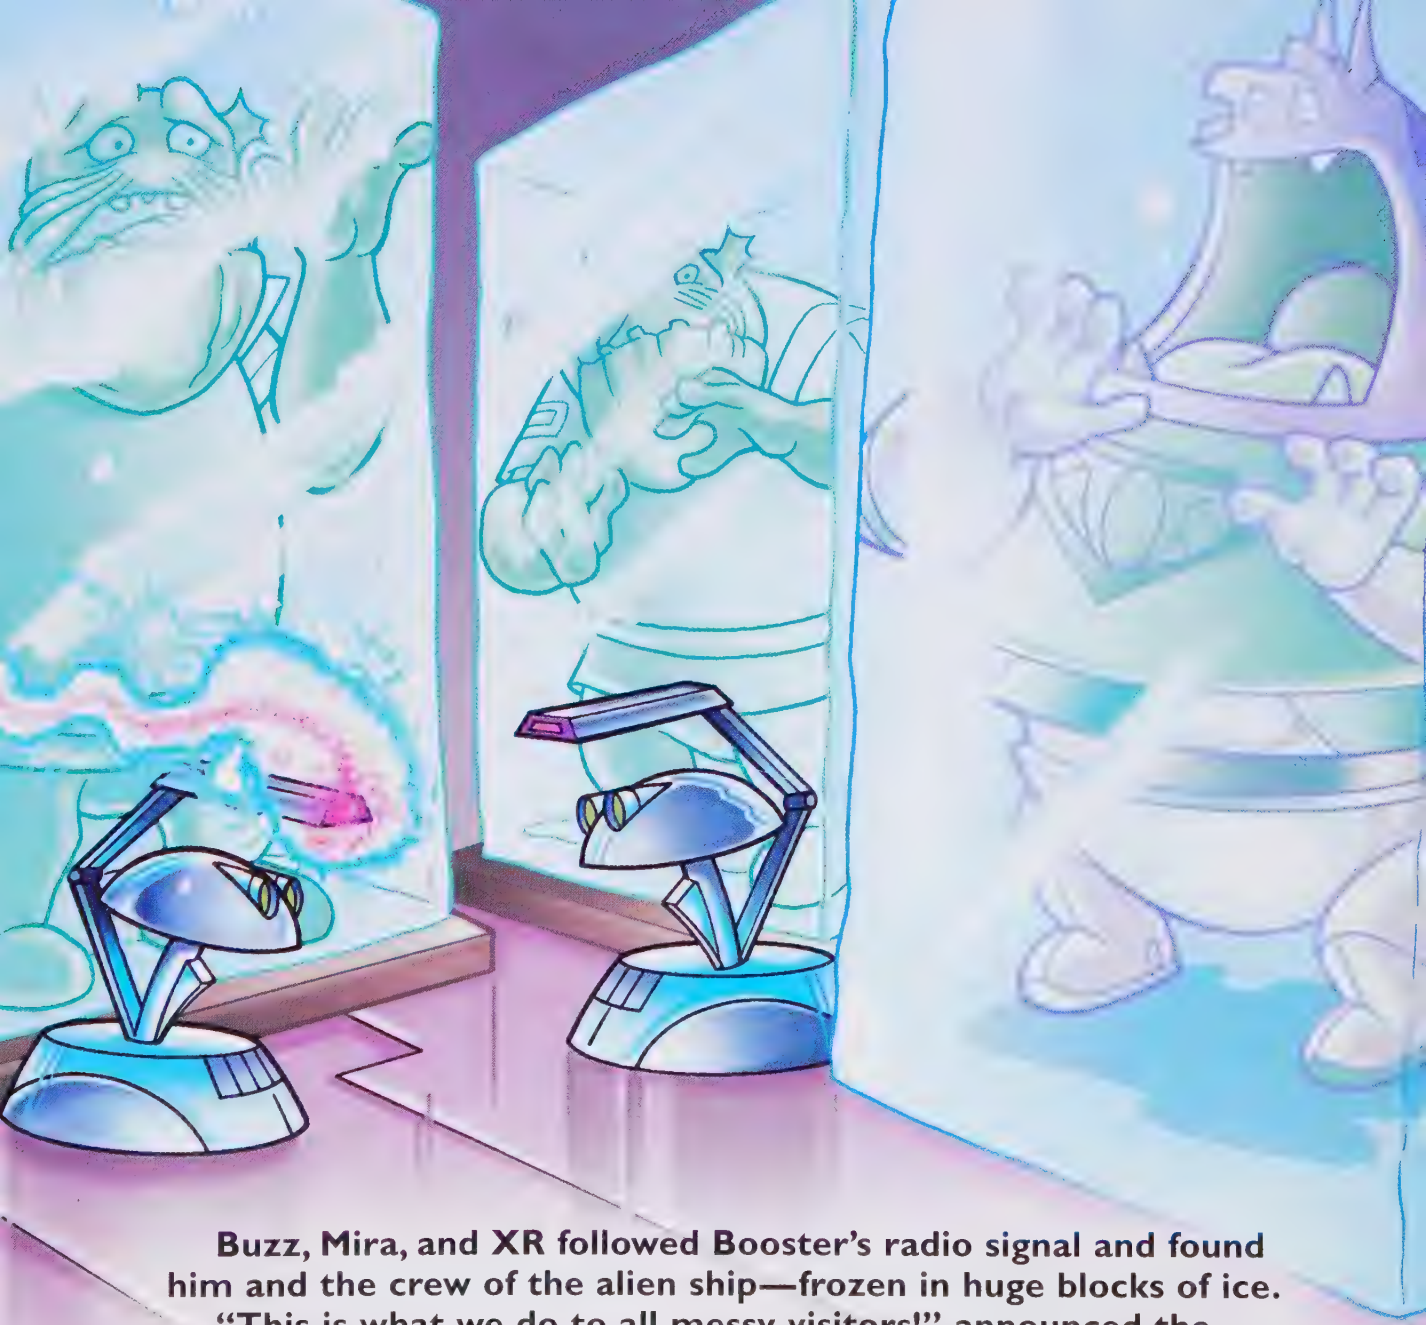


"We still have to find a way to stop this ship!" Buzz reminded his crew as they watched the Care-bot scurry away.

"Hmmm," said Booster. "We've tried slowing it down and blowing it up. Maybe we can find the engine and shut it off!"

"That's it!" exclaimed Buzz. "We must find the power source! Get to it, rookie!" he told Booster.

Booster made his way to the lowest level of the ship. He thought he heard another Care-bot behind a closed door, so he peeked inside. "Oh, no!" yelled Booster over his radio—right before he was hit with a freeze ray!



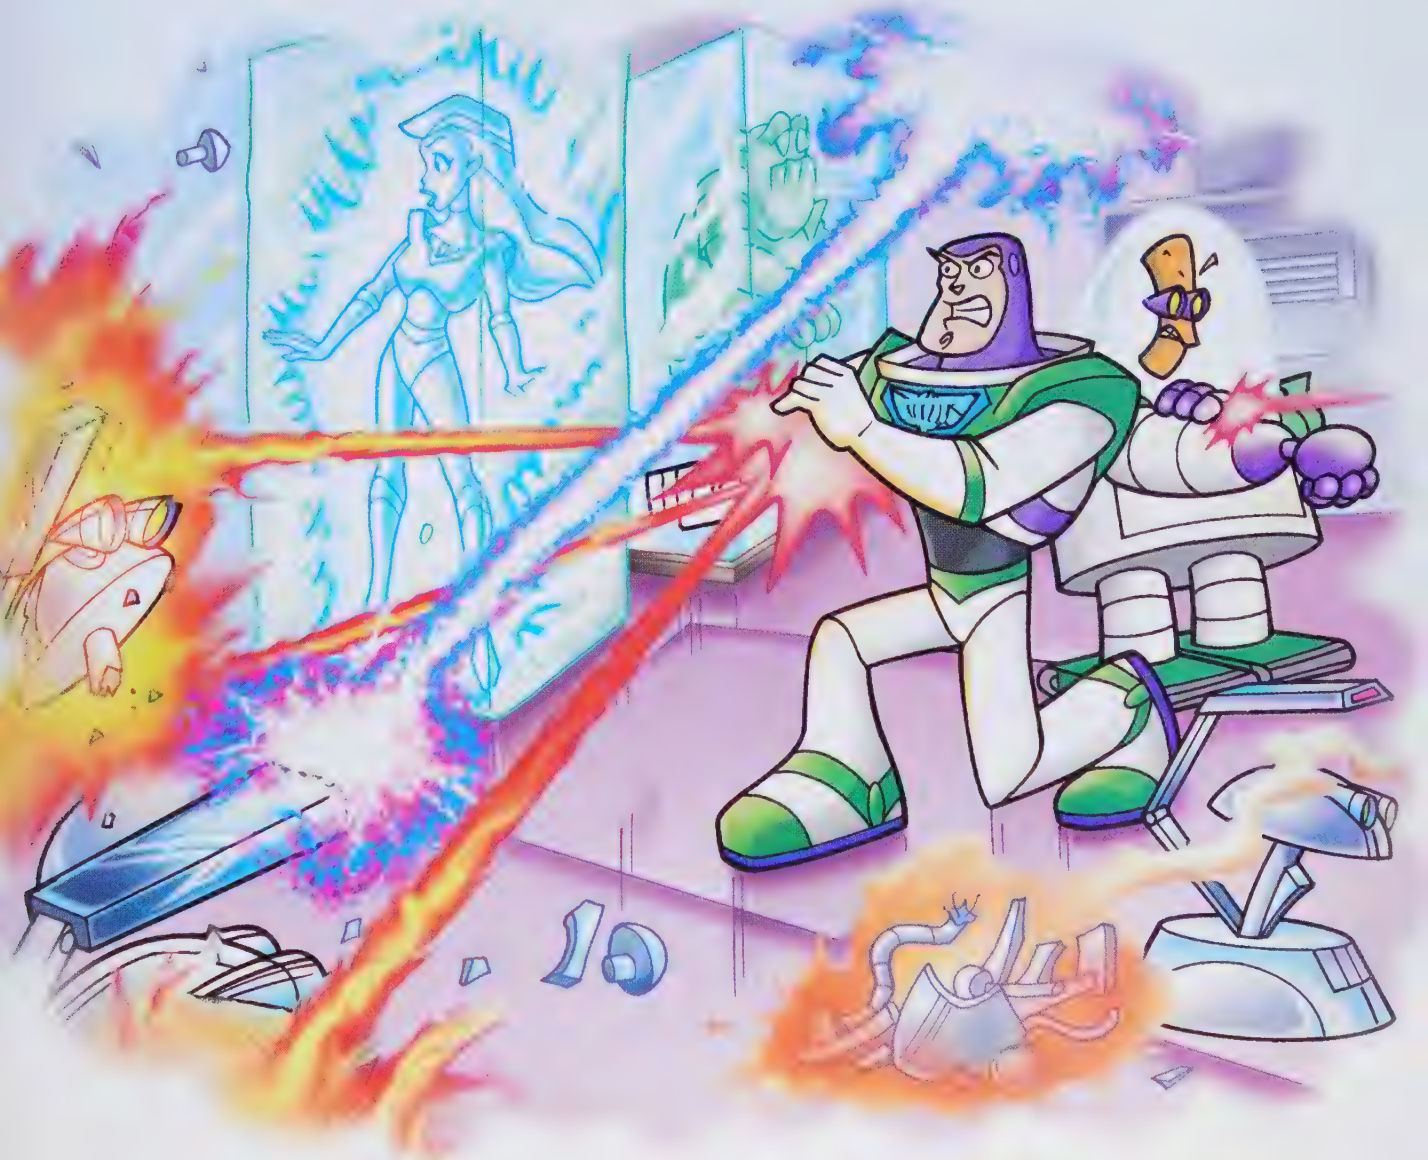
Buzz, Mira, and XR followed Booster's radio signal and found him and the crew of the alien ship—frozen in huge blocks of ice.

"This is what we do to all messy visitors!" announced the Care-bot. "Care-bot is online!"

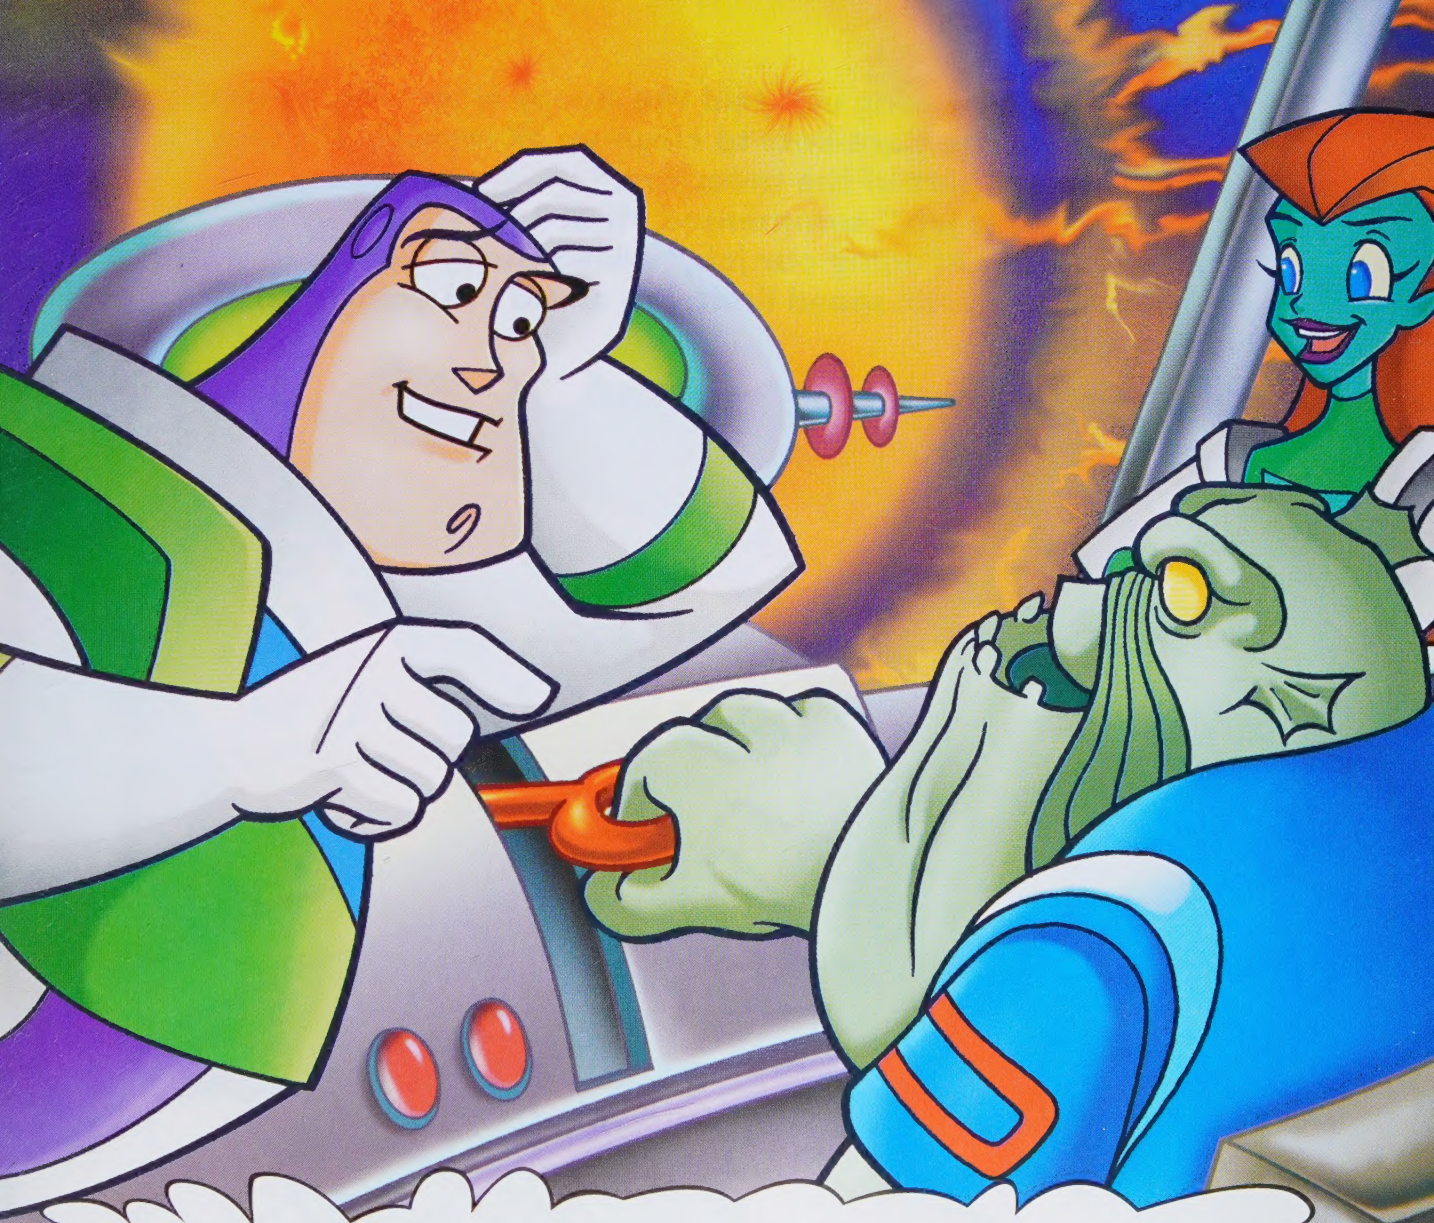
"I should have known," Buzz shouted to XR. "The butler did it!"

"C'mon, Buzz!" urged XR as the Care-bots froze Mira. "It's us against a bunch of neat freaks!"

"Right you are, XR!" said Buzz as he blasted away with his laser. "Buzz Lightyear is online!"



Thinking fast, Buzz opened a garbage chute that sucked the Care-bots out into space. "I'm a bad odor. And you, my friends, are out of lemon-fresh scent!"



Buzz rushed to melt Mira, Booster, and the alien crew with his laser. "Now let's stop this ship!" he said to an alien crew member.

"It's simple," said the alien as he popped the cup holder from the control panel. "This is the manual overdrive system." He slowed down the ship just seconds before it would have hit the sun.

"Thank you for saving us," said the sloppy alien with a burp. "I programmed the Care-bots to clean up all messes, but they thought we were part of the mess, too."
"Just doing our job," commented Mira.
"And speaking of doing our job," added Buzz, "your ship was exceeding the galactic speed limit. I'm afraid I'm going to have to give you a ticket."
